Family Influence in Washington. The Washington correspondent of the Philadelph a Pre-s, says:

"It is curious to notice how 'family influence' controls things in Washington .--Some skilful commentator could make up a most taking brochure on this subject if he chose to do so. The old families are adepts at this business. They are the nobility of the capital. They seem to think everything belongs to them and that they grow sons only to match them to fortunes or to bureaus .--There are a number of families who have five and six in office. The army, the navy. the marine corps, the civil service, home and foreign, are honored by the scions of the first tamilies. All kinds of fascinations are resorted to to accomplish these results. The labors of a d z n senators, the laurels won in a dozen party campaigns, even the learning and experience of a life, are nothing in comparison to the system adopted by these deed, that there is anything morally wrong in their manœuvres. The Supreme Court of this State, has recently rendered a decision in a fugitive slave case which has excited much remark. C. A. St wall left Mississippi in 1857 for California, with a negro body servant, named "Archy." He travelled across the Plains, and arrived in Sacramento on the 1st of October subsequent. On his way he stopped at Carson Valley, and there bought a ranch, on which be placed some cattle be had brought with him. In Sacramento he opened a school and advertised for scholars. He also hired out "Archy," and received wages for him seveto Mi-sissippi, and "Archy" running off from him, he had him arrested and put in prison as a fugitive slave. A writ of habeas corpus for "Archy's" liberation carried the matter eventually before the Supreme Court; and two of the Justices decide that, although Stovail's action has undoubtedly entitled the negro to his freedom according to law, as this is the first case and Stovall is in bad health, the negro must be given up to his master. They say, however, that So vali's case shall not form a precedent, and that in luture they will be governed by the
